

Keen to put something back into healthcare?
Then help train the doctors of tomorrow...

'Outpatients' is a non-profit medical courses initiative run by doctors. We believe that no textbook learning matches contact with real patients like you.

We need you, the patient, to help teach medical students how to become excellent doctors.

With your help they will become doctors worthy of treating you and your family.

What we do

We organise one day courses where small groups of students will examine patients under the supervision of experienced doctors. These courses will be fun and rewarding for everyone involved.

What you can do

Register →

Find out more and register to participate in a course near you at our website

www.outpatients.org.uk

Putting patients back at the centre of medical training

You could ask your doctor to help you with this bit.

Students learn a great deal from patients with all sorts of medical conditions and ‘signs’, specific detectable clues of an underlying condition. Sometimes these are visible, e.g. a surgical scar. Others are subtle and require skill to be detected, e.g. a heart murmur.

My medical conditions or ‘signs’

Here you or your doctor can note down up to three.

1

.....

2

.....

3

.....

We will ask you for these when registering your interest in participating in nearby courses at our website

www.outpatients.org.uk

Putting patients back at the centre of medical training

Outpatients is an independent organisation run by NHS doctors but not directly affiliated with the NHS.